

Mike Fairbotham FCIPS

Mike Fairbotham began his career in the Medical Device industry, supporting and managing high-tech products across Europe. He went on to join the Civil Service where he undertook a variety of unusual roles based around his project management, procurement and transformational skill-set, in the Ministry of Defence and Defra.

In 2015, Mike joined the NHS, leading a four-year transformation of the Procurement and Logistics function of Yorkshire Ambulance Service, whilst also chairing the National Ambulance Procurement Board - the national group responsible for Ambulance sector procurement in the UK. He holds a Master's degree in Defence Acquisition and is both a Chartered Fellow and an accredited trainer of the Chartered Institute of Procurement & Supply.

Mike's specialist areas are: Public Sector Procurement; Procurement enabled change and transformation; Strategy and Leadership; and Soft Skills.

Following his passion for sharing knowledge, Mike set up his own procurement advisory and training company, Perigean Ltd, supporting customers across the public, private and third sectors.
